The microwave beam scans terrain for vertical displacement Doppler shifts in a manner analogous to seismic microphones, thereby achieving the effect of a large multielement seismophone array. Tomographic (signal) processing of disturbances produced by penetrator impacts yields a map of subsurface density which indicates the location of cavities such as tunnels and bunkers.